

Teddy Wayne and Mike Sacks

New Emoticons for 2007

CURRENT EVENTS

I am still cynical about politics but feel faintly optimistic about Barack Obama

I am following the events in Iraq just enough to maintain a smug, I-told-you-so attitude in front of my red-state in-laws

I am feeling surprisingly empty without Saddam to blame the world's problems on

I am feeling surprisingly fulfilled to have Kim Jong Il still around to blame the world's problems on

I am establishing an exploratory committee for a possible run in '08

I am feeling O.K. about global warming this winter

I am trying to adopt an African baby

I am no longer paying any attention to terror-level alerts

I am not ashamed to admit I have a slight crush on Nancy Pelosi

ENTERTAINMENT

I am an unemployed middle-aged man intensely aware of the B-list careers of Sarah Michelle Gellar, Stacy Keibler and the Pussycat Dolls

I am an unemployed middle-aged man intensely envious of $50 million free-agent baseball contracts

I am already dreading the Super Bowl halftime show

I am thinking about auditioning for a reality show that will give me an ephemeral and humiliating taste of celebrity

I am praying that Ellen DeGeneres doesn't overdo the Tom Cruise jokes at this year's Academy Awards

I am open to embracing whatever embattled celebrity next apologizes for a publicly shouted ethnic slur

I am planning on curbing my steroid use this year

I am still perplexed as to what, exactly, Diddy does for a living

I am depressed that Flavor Flav is more successful in the dating world than I am

I am beginning to not really care how the Lost survivors ended up on that damn island

I am happy because it's been more than two hours since I last read an article about Britney, Lindsay or Paris

NEW MEDIA

I am enjoying bragging about not owning a TV while furtively watching NBC.com's replays of My Name Is Earl

I am laughing out loud, but not loudly enough to get kicked out of this Apple store with free Internet access

I am seeking help for my addiction to organizing my Netflix queue

I am mortified at having discovered my grandparents' MySpace profile

I am disoriented by the act of blogging about the act of blogging

I am pretending to feign interest in your problems while listening to a podcast

I am filming a poorly shot YouTube video in response to your poorly shot YouTube video

I am too lazy to tell you in actual words that we should divorce. (Somebody more verbal might be better for you after all)

I am exhausted from having spent the past five hours explaining to my parents how to work their new laptop

META-EMOTICONS

I am already breaking my New Year's resolution to not use cheesy emoticons to adorn my e-mails to co-workers

I am too old to know what an emoticon is, but I am using it anyway